NASHVILLE TENN. September 5, 1863. Gen. N. B. Forrest, Memphia, Tenn.:

My Dear General: We were all very much surprised here to notice in the papers a purdefinite from you on the subject.

The policy of speech in thing and conversational expressions by the leading Southern Generals on the political situation, as published in the papers, is very much questioned by the people throughout the country where I've been, and I regret to see that in almost every maintal paper, political capital is made out of some perverted remark made by our leading Southern men. You, above all, having been quiet, especially since your Brownsville speech, and we hoped that you would remain so, at lead until after the election. Hoping soon to hear from you, I temain,

Very respectfully,

All the other assertions in regard to this organization which he puts into my mouth were derived from some other person, or is the faurication of his own brain.

I said to him for the form and to think final thousing of fact of calling out the militia would bring on a citil war in this state, provided that the militia acted in accordance with the existing laws of the State and the declates of reason and humanity; but that if they attempted to carry out the views of the Governor, so I understood them, by shooting down all mee whom they might choose to suspect of nor, so I understood them, by shooting down all men whom they might encode to suspect of belonging to the Karkiux Klan, or any other organization, and it the Governor shound proclaim markis law in any part of the State and walking around toole in any street of the city, giving its truly rural appearance.
